

FIGURE 43.1 Protein misfolding and fibrillogenesis pathway and targets for intervention. The aggregation of proteins in PMD follows a seeding and nucleation model in which a series of misfolded intermediates are formed. Currently, it is not known which of these conformational species is the most toxic. Various strategies have been proposed to prevent and reverse this pathway for therapeutic purposes.